ON THE FARM.

The apparatus best adapted to have a good coating of manure before winter and then be well cultivated in.

"The ground is not a grave where death and quiet reign," says Prof. King. "It is the birthplace where the circles of life begin anew to run their course."

Lice like to hide away under the ends of the roots. Every time you spray, the roots and give the lice a dose that will drive them out for good and all.

Now all duck yards, as soon as empty, to try. This will not only make an excellent green food, but up in high length, but the eye crop will disfigure the soil.

The moulting season is here. Hens that are moulting now will be through about December, and can be relied upon to furnish a good supply of eggs during the following three months when prices are at the top notch.—From September Farm Journal.

The only way to decrease the amount of smut in corn, is to pluck off the smut-balls and burn them. Corn smut spreads rapidly if the smut-balls are thrown on the manure pile and the manure spread on corn-fields. Never throw a smut-ball on the manure pile!

"I hope in the course of a few decades to see the farmer bettering his country towards making life in the country more interesting and more attractive, and in educating our people to understand how really attractive our country life is at present."

Current cuttings of the new wood are easily made and if done in early fall ought to be well rooted as to the transplanted in spring. In some towns there is never an overabundance of cuttings, while if around 10 cents per quart can be realized for them they pay well. The large cuttings are most profitable, such as the cherry.

It is not too early to mow a piece for hay. This will give it a week or so to incorporate the manure thoroughly through the soil. Haymaking is a voracious feeder and requires a large quantity of manure if best results are to be obtained. One plant highly fertilized will yield a surprising quantity of stalks.

Secretary Wilson says that hereafter eggs sold as "fresh" or "strictly fresh" must be exactly what they are represented to be. Storage eggs must be sold as such or under the pure food law the dealer is liable to a fine of $500 or six months imprisonment or both. Thousands of people do not know how a "strictly fresh" egg is obtained. This will give them a chance to find out.

August is the time to look for horres. Dig the soil away around the stems of fruit trees to the depth of a foot or so, and you will find a mass of small, round, and ending in a long tail. If you dig out a few, you will find a mass of small, round, and ending in a long tail. If you dig out a few, you will find a mass of small, round, and ending in a long tail.

Carver is said to be the biggest cranberry producing town in the world, the crop last year being 70,000 barrels, which was equal to one-fourth of the output of the Cape District and three times that of Wisconsin. The gross income to the town from the berry industry is estimated at over half a million dollars.

Shut the fowls up in a darkened place with just enough light for them to see to eat, and feed on cornmeal, ground oats, cracked wheat and shorts, which may be mixed in equal proportions and scalded. Feed as often during the day as they will eat up the food clean. That is to say, stuff them. Take a light and feed again just before your bedtime, and as early in the morning as possible. Supply them with grit and water and keep the premises clean. Half a dozen fowls together will fatten more quickly than a large number, as they will not pine for company. Cooked potatoes, rice, cornmeal, cracked corn and whole wheat may also be fed. Give no green stuff. It is not soiling, and will do no good. Fowls craved this way should be in fine condition in two weeks. Shut up fowls, they are likely to begin to moult and will get back rather than increase in weight. This treatment is for fattening only.

Colonial Theatre.

"Commencement Days" at the Colonial theatre, Boston, is an entertainment of every scene of the world. The play itself, with its simple story charmingly told, is well acted throughout and the good impression which it made at the very start, with its first night, has been maintained all new plays there have been changes made since the opening night and these are all for the better. At the very opening of the play a new scene is introduced that is replete with action. In the last act, an interpolated comedy scene is introduced, which is very funny and adds immensely to the act. The entire cast is working with a will and the performance runs with that smoothness that usually is not acquired until several weeks of a new play have been passed.

The east with John Curt has given "Commencement Days" is, in every instance, highly capable. Miss Katherine Florence and Miss Lillian Robertson possibly carry the honors but there are none of their associates who are not more than worthy of the tasks assigned them. Miss Blanchard, Miss Bert, Miss Weston, Miss Dale and Miss Smith all contribute conspicuously good work, as do the Messrs. Hugel, Stepping, Melen and Anderson. The production is one of the most picturesque seen here in some time. Matinees are given Wednesday and Saturday.

A Song of Rest.

Oh weary hands! that, all the day, Were set to labor hard and long, Now softly fall the shadows gray, And wait for rest to come along. An hour ago the golden sun, Bank slowly down into the west; Now, weary hands, your rest is done; 'Tis time for rest!—'Tis time for rest!

Oh weary feet! that many a mile Have tramped along a stony way, At last ye reach the resting still; No longer fear to go astray. The gentle heading, rustling trees, Took the young birds within the nest; And softly slumbers the quiet breeze; 'Tis time for rest!—'Tis time for rest!

Oh weary eyes! from which the tears Have come a time like thunder rain— Oh weary heart! that through the years Beat with such bitter, restless pain, Tonight forget the stormy strife, And know what heaven shall send is best; Lay down thy hand and wait for life; 'Tis time for rest!—'Tis time for rest!

Reynolds Post No. 58, G. A. R. Reynolds Post No. 58, G. A. R., held its first meeting of the month Tuesday night of last week and discussed some important features for the winter's work, and those members which will come up for final action at the meeting next Tuesday night and a full attendance is desired. Per order of Committee.

THATCHING.

The Ancient Art to the Low Countries and to England.

Once upon a time two ancient boatmen were hunting bog mosses on Exmoor, on the confines of the land of Devon. About the hour of luncheon they found that their enthusiasm had led them far afield, a good hour and a half from the farmhouse which they had made their temporary headquarters. The only place which yielded promise of food was a shepherd's shack half a mile distant, so they went. That the slink, dark man with curly hair, could offer nothing better than brown bread, which was woefully "cold," or heavy, and raw onions is neither here nor there. The point was that the roof of the shack was artistically thatched with layers of split reeds.

"Feyther taught me the way to do it," explained the shepherd, with an upward jerk of his thumb toward the roof. "An' his feyther taught 'im afore that, an' his feyther afore that, an' 'im back 'till 'twelvy centuries."

"A hereditary art, evidently," said one of the moss hunters to his companion. "Then he said to the man of the house, 'I never saw thatches like those outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent.' Then he said to the man of the house, 'I never saw thatches like those outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent.' Then he said to the man of the house, 'I never saw thatches like those outside of the Low Countries. Safe bet that this fellow is of Dutch descent.'"

A Town of Moss.

Scotsmen are remarkably successful moss collectors. They are also very clean. There are many prosperous settlements in Greater Britain where the Scotchman largely predominates, but the names of these localities like to carry that fact on their face. Nobility, however, can be mistaken as to the Scotchman's nationality. In "Haverhill" this is a town in the Colaba district of Nova Scotia. You will be perfectly safe in assuming anybody there to be a "Scot."—Craufurdian.

WOMAN'S BACKACHE

The back is the mainspring of woman's organism. It quickly calls attention to trouble by aching. It tells with other symptoms, such as nervousness, headache, pains in the loins, weight in the lower part of the body, that a woman's feminine organism needs immediate attention. In such cases the one sure remedy which specially removes the cause, and restores the feminine organism to a healthy, normal condition is

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Mrs. Will Young, of 6 Columbia Ave., Rockland, Me., says: "I was troubled for a long time with dreadful backaches and a pain in my side, and was miserable in every way. I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I was cured. I thought I would never get well. I read what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others and decided to try it; after taking three bottles I can truly say that I never felt so well in my life."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ailments, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, nervous prostration,

GATHERED UP.

None of us may know when the echo of a careless word will cease vibrating in the hearts of some that hear.

It is unpleasant to turn back, even though it be to take the right way.—Herman Proverb.

The very name and appearance of a happy man breathe of good nature and help the rest of us to live.—H. L. Stevenson.

Lots of people foot dollars away and then howl that the reason they don't get rich is that no one gives them a chance.—Athenian Tribune.

There are two ways of meeting a trouble—either give it no attention at all or give it a great deal of attention promptly.—Athenian Tribune.

A husband on being told that his wife had lost her temper, replied that he was glad of it, for it was a very bad one.

NO ENJOYMENT.

"This village enjoys the reputation of being the birthplace of two members of the legislature and one congressman, does it not?" politely inquired the sojourner within its gates.

"No!" replied the landlord of the Pellyville tavern, who was a pessimistic old grumbler anyhow. "It just has it, that's all!"—Puck.

STILL VACANT.

He was a dandy of the modern type, and, tripping down the aisle of the parlor car, he dropped into a seat beside a pretty girl.

"No!"—repeating this seat with you, miss?" he queried.

With a disdained look, she replied in a tone redolent with sarcasm: "No, sir. Nobody yet."—Chicago News.

OVERKINDNESS.

If you have ever been annoyed by a too enterprising barber, you will appreciate the little incident that left one of them rueful and crestfallen the other day.

Having shaved the customer, he ran his hand over the man's head and said incessantly:

"Have a hair trim today, sir?"

"To you think I need it?"

"Yes, it looks pretty long."

"Well, how is the hair barber on hair trimming? Is he pretty good?"

"Yes, he's pretty good, all right. But why?"

"Well, he trimmed my hair yesterday."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Art Comes High.

"A New York lady," said a Puritan, "once ventured to remonstrate with Puritanism because he had charged her $75 for a bill dress."

"The minister," she said, "could be bought for $100, and surely the work would be well paid with $50 more."

"Madame," said Puritan, with his grand air, "go to your American publisher, Sargent, in his little Tito street studio and say to him: 'Here is a yard of emma, value 50 cents, and here are colors, value $1. Put it on a plate with these colors on this emma, and I will pay you $175.' What will the painter say? He will say, 'Madame, those are no terms for an artist.' I say more, say, 'You think my terms too high, but no matter, I will keep the robe. Art does not descend to the littleness of haggling.'"

The Best Way to Live.

If one feels bound to undertake starvation for a period, it is best, a trained physician tells us, to take the process in small steps, to take the process in the usual intervals of fasting absolutely for a comparatively long time. This makes fresh treatment quite unnecessary. Physicians point out that as the body is starved food and sugar disappear first, and then the minor organs are drawn upon to support the brain and heart, continuing until no more material can be spared. Exhaustion is then very near.

Did as He Was Told.

A well known Brooklyn clergyman in a talk to his Sunday school urged the children to speak to him whenever they met. The next day a fiery devil was told to speak to him in the street with "How do, doc?"

The clergyman stopped and cordially inquired, "And who are you, sir?"

"I'm one of your little lambs," replied the boy, "and I'm just going to tell you that you're a good man. And, telling him to the back of his head, he swaggered off, leaving the worthy divine speechless with amazement.

Gazelle Hunting.

Gazelles in Nubia are hunted by a powerful breed of bounds in build somewhat heavier than a greyhound. In spite of being far swifter than the bound gazelle follows a victim from the nervous hunt of constantly stopping to look back to see if it is pursued. It also expends its strength by taking great bounds to an almost vertical direction, thereby not only losing time but exhausting itself, so that it is overtaken without difficulty.

Brides and Wat Weather.

A bride who rather likes to have a wet wedding. It is held to signify that all her tears are now wiped and that she will therefore have a happy married life. I know of no similar belief in the British Isles.

The Ezra of Shilbark cut the day before the wedding the wedding day, and the bride and her girl friends weep all they can, with the idea, it would seem, of getting the mourning of life over so that only joy may remain.

The Madams of the Northberrie at the same end by shouting the bride with water. Some Greek villages have a similar belief in the virtue of a drenching bringing good fortune.

Up Country.

By ALICE LOUISE LEE.

Copyright, 1906, by Alice Louise Lee.

SHE boarded a trolley car at Fourteenth street, New York, being down and jerked through the doorway and into the empty seat beside her.

It was an exceedingly narrow aisle, crowded upon one side by a big red faced man and on the other by a dark haired girl, occupied the edge of the middle ground and stood her dripping umbrella in front of her. Then she looked over the land and saw a young man under an arm and surveyed the hem of her skirt. It was damp.

"Oh, dear," she murmured inwardly, "it is just as I shrink, and it's the one Jim liked best!"

She squeezed her further back on the seat with a feeling of guilt. Three months before, she had been in the same position.

She looked down at her dripping umbrella and saw a young man under an arm and surveyed the hem of her skirt. It was damp.

Jim, glancing down at her averted face, suddenly remembered things. There was an abrupt change in his manner. Shopping, he picked up his grip, saying dryly, "A foolish question to ask after hearing some of your letters read."

Then, without looking at her, he asked, "Which car do you take?" "Broadway car," she replied in a muffled tone.

At Jim's statement a car he volunteered the information stilly, "I'm in the city on business."

"What?" faintly from Jim, but she smiled.

Within the car there was but scant seating room, and Jim suggested that he should sit on the opposite window, the opposite window. "You must read me some of them that told how you were enjoying yourself down here and how much better you were than up here."

"You wrote that the people here called it 'up country'?"

"Yes," came in a low tone from behind his shoulder. "Jim's pride had decided those letters."

"And then you wrote about the school—that a magnificent building you were in and how much better you were than up here?"

"Oh," exclaimed Jim, "did I say that?" But she knew without looking at him that he had said it.

"Oh," interrupted Jim, "did I say that?" But she knew without looking at him that he had said it.

"Let's see," Jim's tone was softly reproachful, "did I write in regard to the boarders?"

No reply.

"I think it was in that letter I told about the lawyer who sits opposite me."

LOCAL LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE

It may cost a little more—but so does the Twentieth Century Limited.

A Chain and Its Links

In telephoning there are three links in the chain that constitutes "good service": 1. The person calling. 2. The operator. 3. The person called.

No matter how much any one of these links do to develop good service, THE RESULT IS DETERMINED BY THE MEASURE OF CO-OPERATION OF THE THREE. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link.

If the person calling fails to consult the catalogue and gives a wrong number, the operator inevitably repeats the error. If the person called fails to answer promptly and the caller leaves the telephone, naturally "there is no one on the line."

Being human, the operator—the third link—is liable to err occasionally, but careful analysis demonstrates that she is not fairly chargeable with many of the difficulties frequently ascribed to her.

If LINK NO. 1 GIVES THE RIGHT NUMBER AND CALLS DISTINCTLY, AND LINK NO. 3 ANSWERS PROMPTLY, the Telephone Company will be responsible for its part of the chain. If no higher motive actuated it, the motive of economy or self-interest, would suffice.

Don't Neglect It

It is a serious mistake to neglect a weak heart. It is such a short step to chronic heart disease. When you notice irregularity of action, occasional short breath, palpitation, fluttering, pain in chest or difficulty in lying on left side, your heart needs help—a strengthening tonic. There is no better remedy than Dr. Miles' Heart Cure. Its strengthening influence is felt almost at once.

ON THE FARM.

Spent today and tomorrow at the Fair grounds. Study the various products, find out who has got a better product than you and then find out how he did it.

Choose for a friend the best farmer in your section.

With farm tools, winter neglect makes spring rust.

Shiftless hens, housed in cold, draughty ramshackle houses, and allowed to wade in the slush and snow, never pay the owner a profit, nor even pay for their feed.

Farmers should use great care not to allow their hens or cattle to have access to potato tops or other vines upon which paris green has been sprinkled. An observance of this advice may prevent the loss of valuable stock, as some have learned from experience.

Orchards that are in grass continually are sometimes injured. The best method is to plow under the grass, lime the land, give an application of well-rotted manure, and reseed. Some orchards do best when in grass, if the soil is rich, but the peach and plum are exceptions. The grass should, however, be plowed under occasionally.

A man who has tried the experiment claims that it is very easy to prevent potatoes from rotting by placing in different parts of the cellar in which they are kept a box containing a quantity of lump slacked lime. He states that this lime absorbs the moisture which has such a detrimental effect upon potatoes, and in his case has resulted in keeping his stock of this commodity longer in good condition. The plan is simple enough and is well worth a trial by any grower who has had difficulty in keeping his potatoes in a damp cellar. —Week's Times.

While there are slight individual differences in digestive efficiency among cows, extensive experiments have shown that these are insufficient to account for the widely variable returns made by similar cows from the quality of the same kind of food. The results obtained in tests of this kind are emphatic. It has been shown that, of two cows of apparently the same merit, from superficial examination, one may return three times as much as the other from a given amount of similar food. They digested their food equally well. It is a well-known fact that there are individual likes and dislikes among cows, which necessitates an intimate knowledge of each cow if best results are to be obtained.

In every state of the union there are many tracts of land, some of which, owing to their hilly character, poor soil, or numerous boulders, are not suitable for farming. The owners of such tracts are often at a loss to know what to do with them. Without question, the best use to which land of this kind can be put is to plant it with trees. One of the fundamental principles of forest economics is, that soil which is not good enough to make the growing of cereal crops profitable should be devoted to the production of wood crops. This does not mean that trees grow better on poor soil than on fertile soil. They will, of course, grow better on fertile soil. But, in proportion to the money invested, better returns are secured from trees planted on the less valuable land.

At the fall planting of trees or shrubs there is an abundance of water at hand, so that as soon as the plants are put into the hole a little soil can be thrown in around the roots, then large quantities of water poured in as the balance of the soil is being thrown in. Too much water cannot be used, providing of course that the soil is well drained. Fill the hole up level full, and then leave it until the surplus water is drained away and the soil settles, which will be in a couple of days or possibly, if the soil is very sandy, it will be only a few hours. Then fill up the vacant space with more soil and pack it down. It is much better to work the soil in around the roots by means of water than it is to endeavor to get it there by tamping with a stick, as the water will carry the earth into crevices which no amount of tamping will ever do. —Sutherland Life.

A GIRL'S VIEW OF IT.

"We were late," growled the girl, who was tired, "because we went fifteen blocks out of our way."

"Why did you do that?" asked her brother. "Why didn't you keep your eyes open and take the right car?"

"I did," said the girl. "I knew which way to go, but my escort got confused, and I didn't dare put him on the right track. If I had he never would have forgiven me. I have lost the friendship of three interesting men by that very evidence of strong-mindedness. Experience has taught me that next to being caught in a fix the thing that most ruins a man is to be guided by a woman. To wander around like a babe in the woods, to receive his steps a dozen times, and finally to arrive somewhere an hour late are humiliations that he can never with any excuse or another, but for a woman to take the lead and say 'We want this car' or 'We must get this way' presupposes a state of lamentable ignorance on his part and makes him hate that woman forevermore."

ARK HATHEN MORAL?

"We do not expect paternal feelings in a child of five," says Dr. Woods Hutchinson in his column in the Home Companion. "Why, then, should we expect any other of those race-regarding impulses which we term 'morality'?" Even to appeal to the "better feelings" as a child of eight or ten is often almost as irrational as the celebrated apostrophe of the emerald isle Irish harpist, who in the fine frenzy of his peroration whirled upon the judge with the thrilling appeal, "Sir, was your ever a mother?" To appeal to a child's better nature, while excellent, in moderation, often does little more than make a hypocrite out of him before his time.

"He has got your hair, and his mother's eyes and nose, and some of the very tricks of manner—and temper—now, and he is just as safe to develop your superb self-control and civic devotion and consideration for others if you will only give him time—and set him a good example. Meanwhile preaching to him that he should possess these qualities will expedite matters precious little, and unless backed up by example, not at all. Remember that life and growth of all sorts are but a response to environment, and new responses can only occur as opportunity is afforded for them."

WOMAN'S WIT UNCERTAIN.

As When This Wife Failed to Appreciate Hubby's Plans.

"Don't always rely upon the ready wit of a woman," said the man who is sometimes pleased to consider himself an oracle. "That ready wit sometimes is a double-edged sword. My wife was to start for home I concluded my letter to her with these words: 'This will be the last letter I will write to you for a long, long time.' 'When I got down to my office the next morning I found a telegram from my wife waiting for me. 'What on earth do you mean?' read the dispatch. 'Later a registered letter came from her. She had blotted almost every line with tears. What it was all about I could not imagine.' 'Then my telephone bell rang, and when I answered I heard my wife's voice speaking over the long distance plain: 'Oh, John!' said she. 'Is that really you? I thought you had committed suicide!'" —Washington Post.
